PRCC seeking funds for worker retraining

BY DENA BISNETTE
Pearl River Community College is attempting to obtain monies for a retraining program for laid-off Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant workers.

If approved, the money would be provided in the form of a

$850,000 grant from the Federal Economic Dislocation and Worker Adjustment Assistance Act administered through the State Department of Economic and Community Development. The funds will provide a center, to be located in Picayune, for the workers who lose jobs when the plant closes. Alex Ross, PRCC's industrial training coordinator, explained that most of the plant's 1,700 employees live in Pearl River County. Officials at Mason-Chamberlain, Inc., the contractor operating the plant, estimate that slightly more than 200 of the workers live in Hancock County.

Under the grant proposal, the center would be open to all laid-off employees at no cost, including those from Louisiana. Ross indicated in a meeting last week that the programs being looked at most closely for retraining are those involving skills currently being used at John C. Stennis Space Center, where the soon-to-be mothballed plant is located.

These programs include such skills as electronics, electrical technology, quality control and even cryogenics. The center would depend heavily on computers as a training method.

Information obtained through the outplacement center at the plant, as of last week, indicated that about 30 percent of the workers who have visited the center so far indicated a need for retraining.

The remaining 70 percent, Ross said, had other skills prior to working for Mason Chamberlain and took their plant jobs during a period of declining economy that affected their regular fields.

A survey taken at the center, a joint effort sponsored by several agencies including Mason Chamberlain, PRCC, Mississippi Employment Security Commission, Job Training Partnership Act, Governor's Rapid Response Team and State Department of Community and Economic Development, indicates that some who already had such skills still want training in other fields.

Another $350,000 for training in truck driving and computer-assisted drafting programs, also to be handled through PRCC but not directly related to the lay-offs.

The community college's board has already taken action pending the approval of both types of funding, which is expected to be announced by the Department of Community and Economic Development's executive director, J. Mac Holaday, sometime next week.

The spending of the money was authorized, pending grant approval, because the board will not meet again until next month and because the lay-offs will begin April 23.

More than 300 lay-off notices have already been sent to Mason Chamberlain employees. Plant information director Robert Burns said another 60 employees were notified earlier this week.

Diamondhead Academy prepares for expansion

BY DENA BISNETTE
Diamondhead Academy, established just five years ago, is ready to begin construction on a permanent building. The land for the project is already being cleared and dirt work is being done.

The slab is expected to be poured by the end of the month and part of the steel for the 17,000-square-foot structure is already on the site.

The school is presently housed in a pair of temporary buildings and has about 30 students from kindergarten to sixth grade, according to PTO President Lenore Smith.

After the construction, the existing classes can be enlarged and an expanded pre-school program can be added, Academy Board President George Cassis said.

Smith explained that the pre-school facility, when proposed as part of the addition, did not receive the expected reaction—the academy board got better than they had hoped to receive.

Smith explained that the PTO has a meeting about two months ago to see what kind of public response there would be to an expansion.

"We were surprised at the response we got. People tend to think of Diamondhead as a retirement community, but we knew there were pre-school age children here. We just didn't realize how many," she said.

"We have registered more students this year than we've had pre-registered any other year, but we haven't got many for the pre-school yet."

Plans are being made to operate the pre-school on an all-day basis.

Registration for all grades is still being accepted and information is available from the school office, which is open from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. and can be reached at 255-1784. A recorder is available to take messages after office hours, Smith stated.

Classes will be limited to 20 students each to insure a quality education, as has been done since Diamondhead Academy opened in September of 1985.

In addition to the pre-school facility, the academy will also add an auditorium, which Cassis said is one of the school's biggest needs right now. The total number of classrooms to be added is nine.

There are also plans for a recreational facility and a ballfield—and there is room. The academy sits on a five-acre site designated for a school in Diamondhead Corporation's original plans for the community.

Cassis said the work is being bid out in small packages rather than as a single large contract. Volunteers and donations are also being accepted.

Various fundraising projects have provided money for the expansion, and more are being planned.

"It all started with a Tupperware party," Smith said. "We raised $60; we were so proud of ourselves."

Waveland woman rescues uncle from burning house

BY TRACI BONNEY
Sometimes it's good to have relatives living nearby.

George Wainwright of Waveland found out the truth of that statement Thursday when his niece, Vita Genna, rescued him from his burning house on Bayou La Croix Road.

Genna seemed embarrassed to talk about it at first, claiming she shouldn't get any recognition.

When one of her daughters, who had reported the incident to The Sea Coast Echo, told Genna she did deserve some notice for her actions, Genna stopped her, saying, "If you saw smoke in a house, wouldn't you stop and help?"

However, as she started to talk, she became animated in her retelling of the story.

She had been babysitting her granddaughter and was taking the baby back to her house. As she passed her great-uncle's house, she noticed smoke rising from the roof.

"My uncle George can't walk, so I knew he wouldn't be able to get out by himself. So I went up on the porch and called to him."

Her uncle, a large man who is wheelchair-bound with infantile paralysis in one leg and arthritis in the other knee and his back, was in the process of gathering some prized possessions into a blanket when Genna entered the house.

"He told me to take the blanket and throw it out the back door into the yard. I don't know what I was thinking — I guess I wasn't thinking — but I did it."

"I guess it's because I was raised to respect my elders, but when he said to do it, I did it."

Her uncle wanted to continue gathering things to take out, but Genna convinced him that they needed to get him out of the house.

"It seemed like it took no time

Waveland Police Department to hold shoplifting program

BY TRACI BONNEY
What exactly constitutes shoplifting, and how do you prevent it?

These are among the questions that will be addressed Tuesday, April 10, 1 p.m., at the Waveland Police Department when the department conducts a program for area businesses. The program will include the viewing of a videotape titled "Shoplifting — Preventing the Crime."

Sgt. Dave Stepro, who is in charge of the program, said the program is open to all local businesses.

The Waveland Police Department also plans to conduct other programs in the future. Stepro said, "We're in the process of developing programs for the community about different topics.

"We want to encourage residents to let us know what they would like to have programs on, because they might have needs we don't know about. So if anyone has any ideas for programs, they can call the police department and ask for me."

SUNRISE SERVICES

Easter community sunrise services, sponsored by Diamondhead churches, will be held at the arboretum, Diamondhead Community Center, April 15 at 8:30 a.m. Choral music, scripture reading, and Easter meditation prayer will be followed by refreshments. Public invited.

Watch out for falling pianos

Some days, the idea you need wouldn't show up if you paid it to be there—then it suddenly drops on your head out of the sky like something a bird has left behind.

If you're really lucky, that idea will drop on you like the piano in the old silent movies.

Remember the one with the little guy with the glasses, Harold Lloyd, who walks through all kinds of danger and it always misses him? Remember the piano that's being hoisted up to a second floor room and falls immediately behind him? To me, ideas are very much like that piano.

That old piano gag has been borrowed countless times; it has actually landed on somebody fairly often, particularly in cartoons where the character can be turned into a walking accordion without being killed.

Sometimes, we're like a bunch of Harold Lloyds walking through life not noticing ideas that are just crashing down around and begging to be put to use.

There are a lot of imposters out there, but there are a lot of genuine good ideas—they have a useful purpose, they're something which can actually be accomplished, and they fit within the limitations of the person who wants to carry them out or he can find assistance in transcending those limitations.

Every so often, one of us decides to be the cartoon character and risk taking a direct hit. And not every idea works, because, like Wiley Coyote, you can give it your best shot and still wind up smashed flat against the side of the cliff instead of catching your elusive Roadrunner.

I've had lots of ideas that didn't pan out, and I'm sure a lot of other people have too. Mine have comparatively low risk factors—all I'm usually risking is that a story might not come out sounding as interesting as I want it to be or that the stuff I planted in the yard will refuse to grow.

I have a lot of admiration for the people who have a high-risk idea and do it—even if it was something like opening a business that didn't last; at least these people have tried.

There are so many people out there who have told me about good ideas, but they've never gotten around to doing anything with them.

I also admire people who recognize ideas, who can hear the crash as the piano falls directly behind them and who can at least help others recognize them.

What I find bewildering is the number of people who wouldn't know a good idea even if it fell right on them, bumped them into the manhole and caused them to fall into the sewer, where they would probably land with one foot perfectly balanced on the hardhat of the worker coming up the ladder in the manhole and continue on their way without breaking stride.

A common problem occurs when one person has too many ideas to act on. While Harold Lloyd is hanging around on the face of that big clock, maybe he can switch it to a 36-hour day to help some of us out. I say "us" because I can always think of more things to do than I can actually carry out.

Time refused to work for the Mad Hatter and it isn't exactly helping all the Harold Lloyds out there either. Time is a good idea's worst enemy, because the longer you procrastinate, the more likely it is that one day you will be walking down the street and find your idea already done.

I never said all ideas were original, but most of them are useful.

Maybe we should make time to act on our ideas. It might make life a bit more interesting for us all if we were a little more watchful of those falling pianos.

I started today, I finally wrote that column I wanted to write comparing ideas to falling pianos.

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

I am wondering what you may think about the Echo Archives column I started in Thursday's edition. It is really interesting going back through the papers of years gone by.

I have come across some very interesting items, as I scan the old issues of the Echo.

Since I have been involved in over one-third of the paper's issues, the reviewing of many of the stories brings back many fond memories.

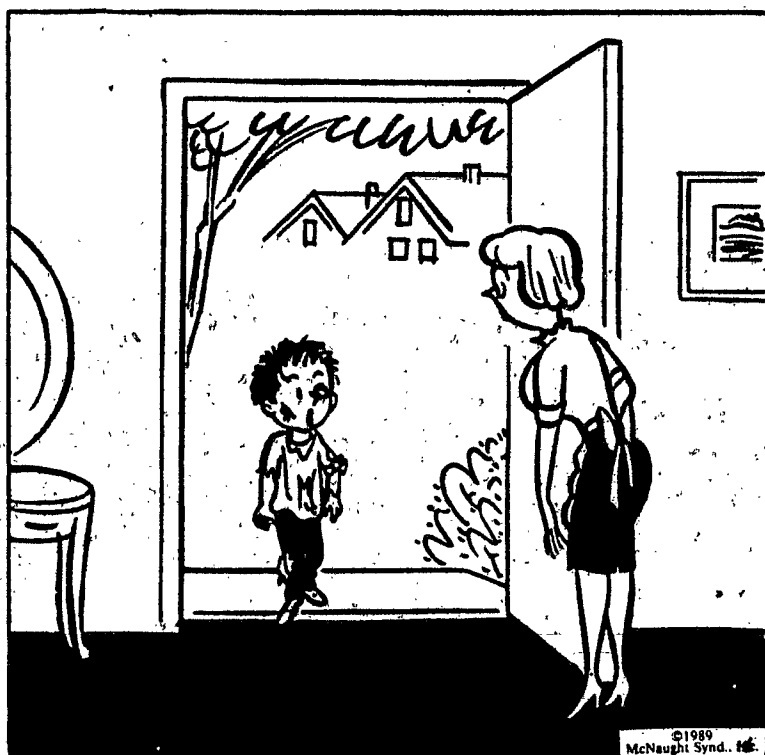

Many of the junior fishermen may want to try their luck at the 6th Annual Junior Fishing Rodeo scheduled for April 21.

The event is sponsored by the Quad S Company at the John C. Stennis Space Center.

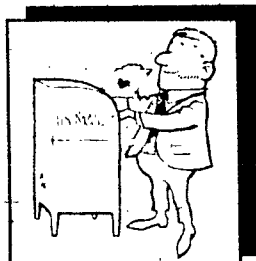

Registration will be at the space center's spillway beginning at 7 a.m. with no entry fee.

There will be two age groups, one through eight and the other nine through 15. Prizes will be savings bonds and fishing equipment.

There will be periodic drawings throughout the day. The fishing rodeo ends at 3:30 p.m. Rain day is April 22.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Aime, Peterson both deserve kudos

Dear Editor,

As a member of the Crimestoppers of the Mississippi Gulf Coast Board of Directors, I was very proud to be at the last board meeting. We issued an Officer of the Month Award, and the different agencies take turns recognizing their officers.

This past month, as I sat with past Officer of the Month Don Oso of the Bay St. Louis Police Department, and Officer Jim Clark, assistant chief of Bay PD Reserve, the award was issued to Gus Aime of the Bay St. Louis Police Department.

Officer Aime was recognized by Sheriff Ronnie Peterson of the Hancock County Sheriff's Department as Officer of the Month nominee. It was the first time the head of one agency recognized the efforts of an officer of another agency.

Sheriff Peterson cited the bravery and agility of Officer Aime in saving the life of an undercover agent in a drug deal which had gone sour. I am very proud of Officer Gus Aime, but special note should also go to Sheriff Peterson. His action startled the other members of the board of directors and impressed the several chiefs of other agencies present.

I remember what it is to be recognized for valor in what is often a thankless position. I still cherish the news articles, letters and citations I received as an NOPD officer. To be recognized by another agency is indeed high compliment. Officer Aime is a credit to all Hancock County and all police officers.

I have always had an excellent rapport with Sheriff Ronnie Peterson, and after this generous act, I personally consider him the Chief of the Month.

Thank you, Sheriff Peterson.

BEST will put more decision making about schools at the local level, and it will provide ways to get parents more involved in the education of their children.

Finally, BEST will help make sure that children are ready to learn when they get to schools, the dropout rate will be drastically reduced and that adults will get unprecedented new help in learning to read and write.

Our work is not done yet, however. My commitment, and the Legislature's commitment, is to make sure that Mississippi's BEST is funded. Make no mistake about it: The passage of this bill makes excellence in education Mississippi's top priority.

Not only is it a great day in Mississippi, it is a new day in Mississippi.

Mississippi's BEST will hold schools accountable for students' learning. It will offer incentives to schools that

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

Riverboat gambling passage a big surprise to many

Four months before the convening of the 1990 legislative session in January, Sen. Bob Dearing of Natchez sent Sen. Robert Monty of Greenville a copy of his bill and asked Monty to join as co-author.

Dearing's bill would legalize riverboat gambling casinos on board sidewheel or sternwheel boats operating from state ports on the Mississippi River.

Monty, who the past two years had introduced bills to merely create a state gaming commission only to see them die without even being considered, laughed to himself and dashed a note back to Dearing.

"Sure I'll sign it...good luck, Bubba," Monty wrote. And Monty thought for certain that would be the last time anything would be heard from the riverboat gambling bill.

Last week, after the Mississippi riverboat casino bill had made its amazing voyage through the Legislature and into the laws of the state, Monty and a lot of other lawmakers were calling it the Phenomenon of the 1990 Legislature.

Frankly after 43 years of closely following the Mississippi Legislature, I must say that I would never have given the possibility of this state legalizing casino gambling on the Big Muddy any better chance than the proverbial snowball in Hades.

It ranks in my book with that other phenomenon of Mississippi legislative history—the repeal of prohibition in 1966. Just think: the last state in the nation to legalize liquor is now the first state on the Mississippi River to legalize riverboat casinos.

Since Mississippi's new riverboat gambling law went into effect April 1, we "won" the "race" with Iowa and Illinois for the right to have the first floating casinos on the river. Iowa's new riverboat gambling law doesn't go into effect until April, 1991 and Illinois' next January.

What's more, Mississippi's spanking new law will allow dockside gambling, something that they can't have in Iowa and Illinois.

When Dearing's bill passed the Senate over a month ago, it had provided that vessels must be "underway on the Mississippi River." Very quietly, the language was rewritten in the House version to remove the word "underway." Also added were "navigable waters" in any county on the Mississippi. Without any fanfare, the Senate concurred in the House amendments, avoiding putting the bill in conference, where it could have gotten bogged down. Some senators said later they didn't realize that the bill no longer required riverboat casinos to leave the dock before gambling could begin.

That the riverboat gambling bill managed to pass the Senate to begin with is the most remarkable part of the story. This was the legislative branch where the lottery had been killed only several weeks before, despite a full-court press by the Mabus Administration to pass it.

There's some indication that the potent anti-gambling lobby, particularly the Mississippi Baptist Convention, was caught by surprise by the momentum of the riverboat casino bill and didn't have their forces mobilized after having won the lottery battle in the Senate.

Dearing, who deftly downplayed the gambling side of the bill and stressed the economic development potential and increase tourism, admits that the bill overcame steep odds. "Sometimes you never know what will pass," he said. "Timing is awful important."

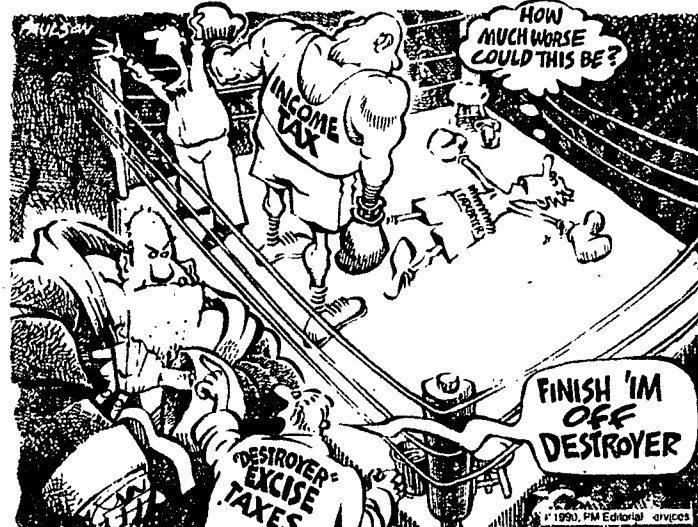

It may be difficult for some skeptics to accept, but the facts indicate that no pro-gambling lobby money was brought into Mississippi to help pass the riverboat casino bill, even though it now appears that several investors will put millions into the state's new "industry."

Sen. Tommy Gollott of Biloxi believes last year's passage by the Legislature of the Gulf Coast cruise ship bill was the breakthrough on gambling which opened the way for the riverboat casino bill to follow. "Before last year, it was unheard of to come here with a gambling bill," he said. "Now look at what's happened."

And Gollott was able to parlay the riverboat bill into getting new legislation which will let gambling cruise ships on the Coast operate in Mississippi Sound, without having to go to international waters as required by last year's cruise ship law.

You wonder what else is in store on the gambling front in this Bible belt state.

"Just wait until 1992," Gollott says with a grin.

THE PEOPLE'S BUSINESS

From the Mississippi Economic Council

Free enterprise experience for teachers

Mississippi's business leaders have voiced frustration about the lack of understanding of the free enterprise system among high school and college and university students.

They, also, have been willing to help solve that problem. They have supported the Mississippi Economic Council's American Enterprise Center and its free enterprise educational efforts. And, they have supported other free enterprise education activities.

Now, with the coming of summer, business leaders concerned with free enterprise education have another opportunity to make a difference.

A suggestion—employ teachers for the summer.

Move teachers from the classroom to the workplace for the summer. Give them hands-on experience in the day-to-day operations of business.

Let them experience and understand the problems business owners and operators face every day. Let them find, first hand, the importance of communications, of math, of English, of discipline.

Let Mississippi's teachers carry the message of free enterprise back to the classroom.

It could make a difference in the work force.

Young writer chases dream into anthology

BY TRACI BONNEY

Sarah Taylor chased a rainbow right into the spotlight in the recently held sixth annual Young Writer's Contest.

Sarah, daughter of Rep. Gene and Margaret Taylor, was one of 105 elementary school students chosen as national winners among about 15,000 entries.

The contest is a writing competition for children in grades one through eight. It is sponsored by Ronald McDonald Children's Charities.

Sarah's poem, titled Imagination, is being published later this spring with the other winning poems in an anthology, Rainbow Collection: Stories and Poetry by Young People.

Appropriately enough, the first few lines of her poem are, "Chasing the rainbow/looking for gold/never too young/never too old."

This is the second year that Sarah, an 11-year-old fifth grader at Bay Catholic Elementary School, has won a spot in the contest's anthology.

Her first venture into poetry writing came as a handwriting assignment.

"It was fun, so I started writing more," she said.

She takes as her subjects "mostly nature and stuff," she said.

"I'm not sure how I get the ideas. Sometimes I get them when I'm looking out the window or thinking about something."

Sarah was not the only student from Bay Catholic Elementary to do well in the contest. Three other local students were included in the top four percent: third grader Katie Muir; fourth grader Margie

Sarah Taylor

Harris; and fifth grader Corinne Carver.

Sarah said she plans to enter the contest again next year.

As for other future plans, she isn't sure whether she will ever be a professional poet, but she is thinking about possibly being a journalist.

Here is her poem in its entirety:

Imagination

Chasing the rainbow

looking for gold,

never too young,

never too old.

Looking for goblins,

slimy and green,

and trying to find a fairy queen.

There are many unusual things to find,

just remember:

"Imagination is the key to your mind!"

Even the students are getting in on the act. One of the events in which they have been able to participate, for example, was a walkathon.

The school has four certified teachers now and will be able to add some along with the expansion of the academy's physical facilities. Also, more programs can be set up, Smith said, just during the last two school years, computer education, art, music, a student newspaper, a library program with a certified librarian and the school's first yearbook have become part of Diamondhead Academy.

Most of the work on the new facilities is expected to be completed during the summer, Gennis said. Anyone who would like to help with the project may contact Smith at 255-7743.

"Diamondhead is growing faster than anywhere else in Hancock County," She said. "That's what has created the need for this school."

at all to get him to the back door, but it's like it took forever for him to get down the back steps into the yard."

Genna had been able to get her uncle to the back porch, but she couldn't pull his wheelchair down the steps. He attempted to stand and move using a pair of crutches, but he fell and ended up having to scoot down the stairs.

Genna said, "I had to get his wheelchair down so he could sit in it after he got down the stairs, but I couldn't get around him to get it. So I had to pick it up and lift it over him."

Her uncle kept urging her to go check on her granddaughter, who was in the car, but she insisted on making sure he was safely away from the house first.

As she struggled to help him, his wife and daughter, along with several cousins and one of his sons, arrived at the scene. While some worked to get him away from the burning house, others called the fire department.

As Genna told her story, she paused often, staring into space and biting her nails as though she were back at the scene.

"I was really nervous. We all were. I still am, some."

"Can you tell?" she said half-jokingly.

Although the family members all seemed physically well, Genna said, the house suffered heavily from the fire.

The roof was destroyed. The walls still stood, but between the soot and ash from the fire and the water used to put out the fire, the house is now uninhabitable.

"I had some bad dreams last night, real bad ones," Genna said.

"But we're all okay now."

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire Caire

In earlier years as the "R-less" months of late spring and summer approached, our good Southern housewives served oysters even more often than usual to enjoy this favored delicacy as much as possible before removing oysters from the family menu, in the belief that oysters were not good from May through August.

Lack of modern refrigeration undoubtedly had much to do with this theory, for many of us now enjoy oysters the year round, with never a thought of the "R's" or lack of them.

One of the tastiest dishes I've enjoyed since my own early days—I suppose it's a combination of good food and nostalgia—is baked stuffed oysters. These were usually served at our house in well-scrubbed oyster shells, with a whole oyster nestling in each shell, and a marvelous sort of "dressing." Here's:

BAKED STUFFED OYSTERS

At least a pint of oysters, chopped into small pieces (you may either add extra oysters, whole, or reserve some of your two dozen if you wish to serve the dish this way, or you may make this dish with chopped oysters only.) Reserve oyster liquor.

1 cup finely chopped onions
2 cup finely chopped green onions

1 1/2 cup parsley, chopped
1 1/2 cup celery, chopped

Piece of stale French bread (several inches long, or 1/3 loaf)
1 1/2 stick butter or margarine

Generous dashes hot pepper sauce and Worcestershire sauce

to your taste

Pepper, salt, cayenne pepper to taste

1 cup bread crumbs mixed with 1/2 cup melted butter

Melt the half stick of butter in a heavy skillet over medium heat, and add the onions, green onions, celery and parsley. Saute for just a couple of minutes. Add the oysters, cook just a minute longer (slow fire, of course).

Meanwhile, have the French bread soaking in the oyster water. Squeeze the bread until barely moist, adding a bit more water if needed. Add bread and salt and pepper to the mixture in the skillet, and cook over low heat, stirring, for five minutes, or until the mixture begins to dry out a bit, not too much, though!

Remove from the fire and check seasoning. If you're using oyster shells or ramekins, just pack the mixture into the shells and top with the buttered bread crumbs. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 15 or 20 minutes, or until the tops are lightly brown and crusty.

If you're using a whole oyster in each shell, just place the oyster in the shell, of course, and mound the dressing around and over it—sort of "hidden treasure" idea! You may also pile the mixture into a baking dish, top with buttered crumbs, and bake till browned. Enjoy!

P.S. I like to use lots of oysters in this dish.

Honey brings out flavor in many recipes

Honey adds beautiful golden color and delightful sweet flavor to bring out the best in so many foods.

For years honey has been recorded as part of history. In ancient Egypt honey was used by most households as a sweetening agent. During this time the people valued honey so highly that it commonly was used as a tribute or payment.

The American colonies used honey to prepare food and beverages, to make cement, to prepare furniture polish and varnish as well as for medicinal purposes.

Honey is still popular today, whether it is combined with other ingredients for an enticing dish or served by itself. There are a number of honey products on your grocery store shelves. Some of these include honey graham, honey cereals, honey mustard and honey nuts.

Honey may be purchased in several forms. The first of these is liquid or extracted honey. This is usually the best form to use for baking.

Most honey in the United States is sold in this form. Comb honey is honey still contained in the cells of the combs where it was produced. The comb is edible.

The beekeeper may choose to produce a creamed or whipped honey by whipping it to give the honey a fluffier texture. This form is ideal for spreads.

Honey adds a sweet, smooth yet distinctive taste to foods. When mailing baked goods, foods cooked with honey would be the obvious choice because honey retains and absorbs moisture.

When you substitute honey for granulated sugar in recipes, a good rule of thumb is substitute honey for up to one-half of the sugar. After a lot of practice honey may be substituted for all the sugar in some recipes.

Reduce oven temperature by 25 degrees to prevent over-browning of baked goods using honey. The amount of liquid in these recipes should be reduced by 1/4 cup for each cup of honey used in baked goods.

Add about 1/2 teaspoon baking soda for each cup of honey used. This is necessary because honey is slightly acidic.

When making yeast breads, though, it is not necessary to add baking soda. Yeast needs a slightly acidic environment for the dough to rise. Baking soda would not have to be added in recipes where sour milk was used.

To measure honey accurately and easily, spray the measuring cup with cooking spray first. A 12-ounce jar of honey equals a standard measuring cup. Honey can blend easier into sauces, marinades and beverages if it is slightly warmed. Be careful not to overheat.

Honey is a versatile product. It may be used on desserts, meats, salads or beverages. For a delicious, nutritious treat, mix honey with milk or pour over your favorite ice cream. Try using honey as marinades for chicken.

All forms of honey, including liquid honey, will crystallize naturally over a period of time.

Taste or purity is not affected. In fact it makes a delicious crunchy spread in this form.

To bring honey back to its natural liquid state, place container of honey in a pan of warm water (not hot) until the crystals disappear or by microcooking one cup of honey in a microwave safe container on HIGH for two to three minutes, stirring every 30 seconds. Do not boil or scorch.

Store honey in a sealed container at a temperature not over 100° F. Honey may be frozen for long periods of time without affecting its color or flavor. Never store honey in the refrigerator, because this will enhance granulation.

Whether you are enjoying honey with your morning cereal or combining it with lemon juice for a cough remedy, no home should be without the wonderful taste of honey. Honey requires little digestion, unlike ordinary sugars, so its absorption and energy boost occur quickly.

Reflections

On Life

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

Our greatest privilege

If you had to state what your greatest privilege in life is, you could no doubt make an argument for a number of things, including, first of all, the privilege of being alive, from which all other privileges and opportunities stem.

Let us make a ground rule here, excluding that most obvious privilege from your list.

Apart from life itself, then, what do you consider the greatest of all privileges on Planet Earth? If you are religiously inclined, you could certainly make a case for faith in God, since that faith is the key to everything which is immeasurably good, wholesome, life-giving and everlasting.

However, those answers, while very true, are too easy. Let us make a second ground rule, excluding both life and faith.

I want to force you to choose between the things in life which belong to the immediate domain of your words and actions—if you will, your life and your faith in action toward other people.

Given this latest restriction, what would you name as your most prized privilege in life?

Again, this is arguable, but, if you have a Christian bent, I submit that you must pay attention to a certain North African before giving your answer.

Several years ago, I wrote an article about that North African, calling him the most privileged black of all time and, excepting Mary and Joseph, the parents of Jesus, like the most privileged mortal ever.

He was none other than the first human being who helped Jesus to carry his cross: "They pressed into service a passer-by, Simon, a Cyrenian, who was coming in from the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to carry his cross" (Mk. 15:21).

No other black, other human could ever claim that unique privilege, and anyone who asked Simon in later years what was the most privileged thing which he had ever done would receive the answer: "I was pressed into service to carry the cross of Jesus Christ! Though unwillingly at first, I soon came to appreciate helping the Savior of the world in his darkest hour!"

This is much more than a bit of trivia for Black History Month. The singular privilege of Simon of Cyrene extends far beyond blacks to each human being on this entire planet.

If it was such a privilege to help Jesus carry his cross, it is, wonderful to say, equally a privilege to share the cross of every sister, every brother on the face of the earth. Jesus made this clear:

"Amen, I say to you, whatever you did for one of these least (sisters) brothers of mine you did for me (Mt. 25:40).

Once more, you may want to argue that there are many things other than the cross which you can share with your sisters and brothers, and some of these things belong to the higher workings of faith, hope and love. True. Yet, there is nothing so high as the cross, the vehicle of salvation for us all.

Can there be any doubt as to the greatest privilege in your life, considering that the cross is the instrument with which Jesus redeemed us and through which he identifies us as his followers?

According to the just-quoted words of Jesus by which he identifies himself completely with each human being, to help any fellow human carry her/his cross is to assist Jesus in the work of redemption just as surely as Simon of Cyrene did.

This is the most unbelievable privilege in life, that we bear the cross of Jesus by feeding the hungry, instructing the ignorant, comforting the downhearted, and accepting the rejected.

Computer-assisted instruction helps C.B.M. students achieve

BY DENA BISNETTE

In many schools, only students in special programs have the opportunity for computer-assisted learning. At Charles B. Murphy Elementary School in Pearlington, all of the students are using computers once a day.

According to Principal Clementine Williams, the program offers the children a Hawkins/Stafford Elementary and Secondary School Improvement Act allowed schools with 75 percent of their students qualifying for free and reduced-price lunches to use Chapter I monies for improved instruction for all students in targeted grade levels, according to Marie Donald, Chapter I coordinator.

The money for this particular program did not require matching funds from the local school district as some federally funded projects do.

In regular Chapter I programs, students must often be pulled out of other classes in order to go to their computer-assisted lesson.

Under this particular program, the entire class can go to the lab at the same time.

There are about 25 terminals available.

The supplemental lessons are available for students from kindergarten through sixth grade at Charles B. Murphy.

The program is also beneficial, Williams said, because it provides supplemental instruction for all students at all levels, not just those below their expected grade level.

Since the program was installed, more than 500 students in the two schools have worked with it and have been recognized for achieving more than a year's growth in reading or math, Donald added.

Each child gets about 10 minutes' instruction in reading and 10 minutes in math. The program allows a child to advance at his own pace.

By doing so, the computer assisted learning program involves all of the school's teacher. In addition, parental involvement is sought and encouraged.

One of the ways in which parents can be involved is homework. For each lesson, the students can be provided with a worksheet he can take home.

supplement to their regular classroom lessons.

"We have students who have advanced an entire year in their work," she said as she brought a group of Adopt-A-School volunteers who visited the school Thursday into the computer lab.

Rose Acker, a teacher assistant who operates the lab, told the students using the facility to continue their work, allowing the visitors to see several of the lesson choices available.

The same program exists at Gulfview Elementary School in Lakeshore, which is also in the Hancock County District.

The program has its roots in Chapter I, a program which uses computers for remedial instruction in reading and math.

In 1988, federal legislation called the

The youngster types an identification number, types his first name, and is greeted by the computer with a "hello" and instructions for choosing the area in which he wants to work and which lesson he wants to try.

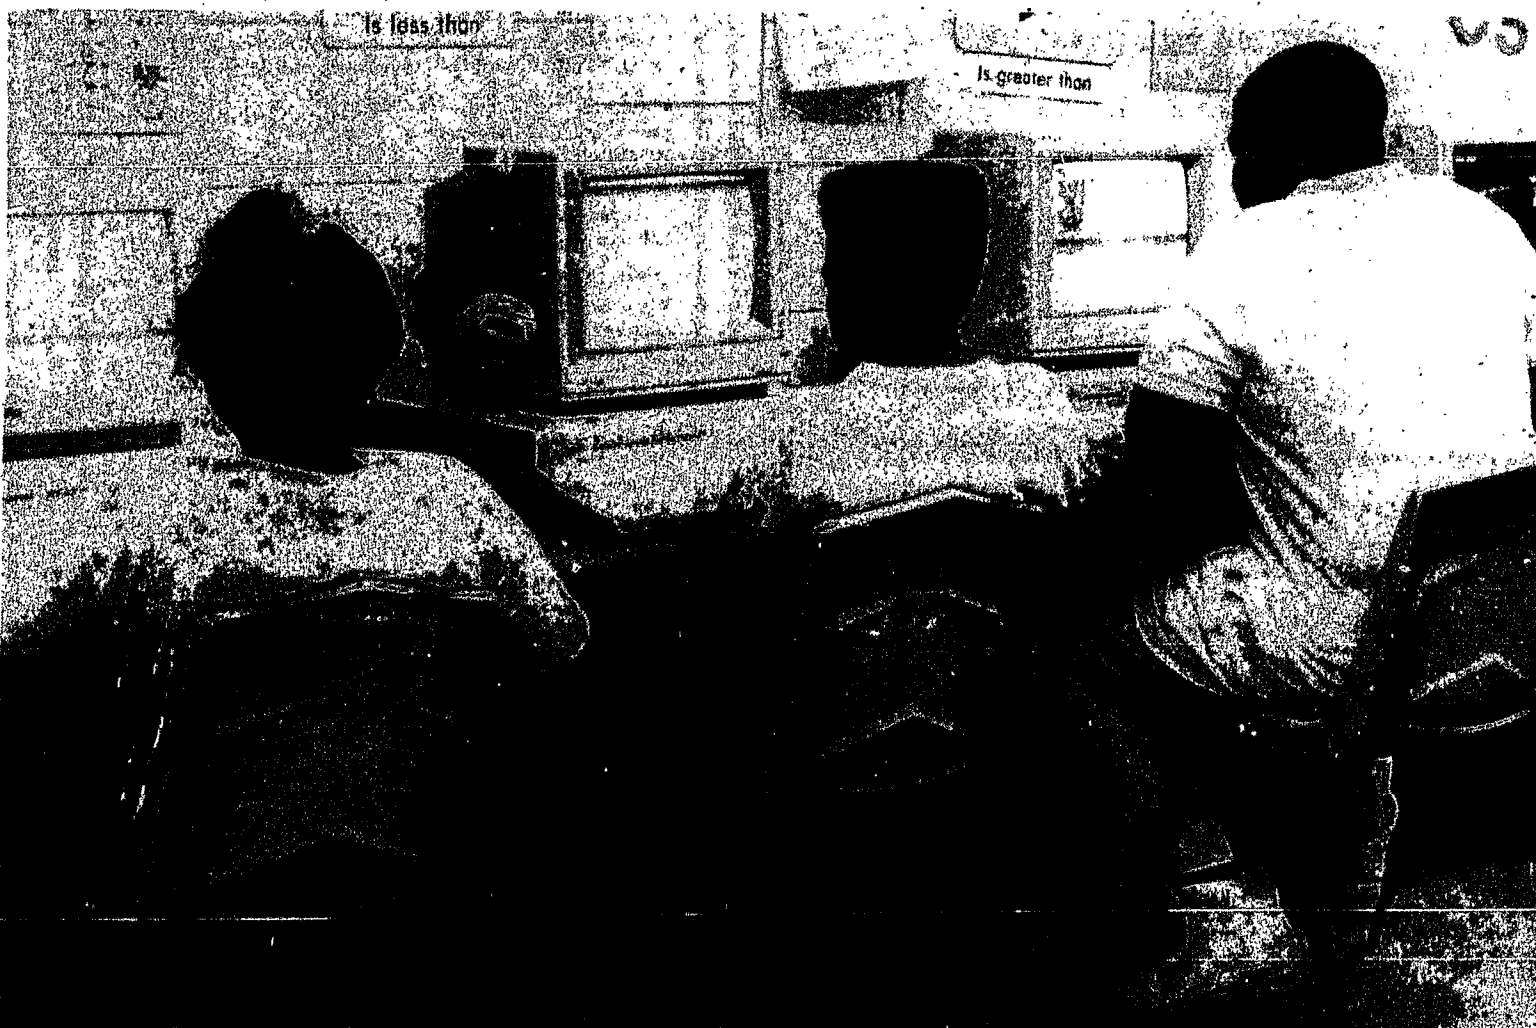

The machine provides the child with feedback by scoring his work, and if he needs help the computer can not provide, Acker is there to guide him.

The program also provides a management system to assure that computer lab teachers are able to keep up with the student's progress without devoting as much time to testing and evaluating individual lessons as in conventional teaching.

That, in turn, provides the regular classroom teacher with information needed to plan and accomplish more individualized instruction for each child.

"We have students who have advanced an entire year in their work."

Groundbreaking slated for Anderson Museum

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Walter Anderson Museum of Art will be held at 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday, April 10, at the museum site on the corner of Washington Avenue and Joseph Street in Ocean Springs.

Remarks by special guests will include U.S. Congressman Gene Taylor, Jackson County Beat Four Supervisor Tommy Broadnax, and Ocean Springs Mayor Kevin Alves.

The ceremony is the culmination of a Capital Campaign undertaken by the Friends of Walter Anderson Inc. in November 1988 which sought to raise $1.2 million to build the museum. To date, the group has reached in cash and pledges $1,059,885.

"We are finally beginning to realize our dream to provide a center for learning, cultural enrichment and enjoyment on the Gulf Coast through the works of Water Ingles Anderson," said Courtney Blossman, chairman of the board. "In addition to the finest available examples of Anderson's art in all media in which he was active, the museum will provide educational outreach through publications, classes, seminars, lectures, programs and events."

The museum project is supported in part by grants from the Mississippi Arts Commission and the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, D.C., a federal agency, and will be one of only a very few museums in this country named for and dedicated to one artist.

The museum is scheduled to open in early 1991. Designed by Ocean Springs Architect Ed Rickard, in association with Jim Eley of Eley & Associates Architects of Jackson, the 3,050 square foot building will include a gallery connecting it to the Ocean Springs Community Center, which houses the murals entitled 'Seven Climates of the Coastal Area and History of Ocean Springs,' painted by Anderson in 1950-51.

Groundbreaking ceremonies will begin promptly at 10:30 a.m. For further information, contact Blossman at 872-3164.

What to do if chest pain grabs your attention.

Don't wait to see what's going to happen next. By then it may be too late. Get help immediately.

Chest pain and pressure are heart attack symptoms. There are others. The pain may radiate down your arm, shoulders or neck. You may become dizzy, break out in a cold sweat, feel faint or sick to your stomach.

Sometimes only a few symptoms occur. Sometimes more. Sometimes the symptoms can even be due to another problem.

Only one thing is certain. The sooner heart problems are treated, the better your chance of recovering to live a full and productive life.

That's why we're here. The Heart Emergency Service at NorthShore Regional Medical Center is the first of its kind in this area. Located in our Emergency Department, we save lives by detecting heart problems rapidly and providing necessary treatment.

If you experience any symptoms of a heart attack, get immediate medical attention. Anytime, day or night, you can call our emergency 24-Hour Heartline™ at 1-800-HEART-13. An emergency care professional is available around the clock to answer questions, give advice or even dispatch an ambulance if necessary.

24-Hr. Heartline
1-800-HEART-13

The Heart Center at NorthShore Regional Medical Center offers a complete range of cardiac care services. That's important to you during those first critical hours following a heart attack. And although you'll probably never need them, it's good to know our heart team is available 24 hours a day.

We employ powerful clot-dissolving drugs that can save lives by stopping and, in some instances, actually reversing the effects of heart attacks. But the sooner these drugs are administered the better the chance of a complete recovery.

Our advanced diagnostic capabilities, including a state-of-the-art cardiac catheterization laboratory, help us assess and treat heart problems more quickly than ever.

We also offer educational programs to help people prevent heart attacks, and rehabilitation services that help heart patients recover faster and more fully.

Learn more about The Heart Center at NorthShore Regional Medical Center by calling (504) 641-DMMD and we'll send you a free brochure that describes our cardiac care services in greater detail.

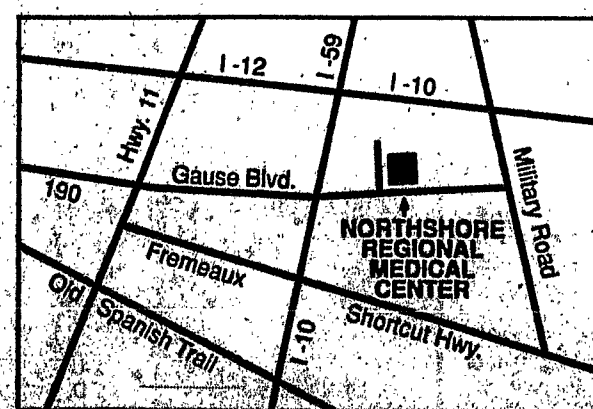

Remember, if your heart tries to tell you something, pay attention. Grab the phone. Call 1-800-HEART-13. Or go to the nearest hospital emergency department. If you're close to NorthShore Regional Medical Center, use the Heart Emergency Service in our Emergency Department located just east of Interstate 10 on 190—Exit 266—Gause Boulevard. Right away. Before the problem gets out of hand.

Tips on bluebird management offered

Bluebirds, after the purple martin, are the most sought after songbird in Mississippi. It is easy to understand why.

The bluebird is beautifully colored, has a soft, musical song, is trusting of humans, which makes it easy to observe, and destroys many harmful insects.

Natural Food

The food of bluebirds consists of about 70 percent animal matter and 30 percent vegetable matter.

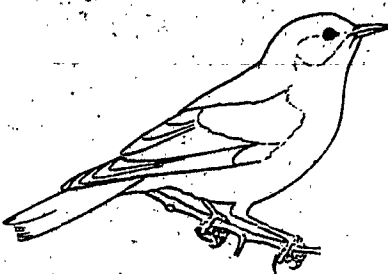

Animal food is almost entirely common insects such as grasshoppers, crickets and caterpillars. Other insects such as spiders and snails are sometimes eaten.

The plant foods of the bluebirds are usually fleshy fruits such as holly, dogwood, elderberry, sumac, pokeberry, cherry, honeysuckle and blackberry.

Favoring or establishing these or similar fleshy fruit-producing plants will help attract and hold bluebirds.

When managing for bluebirds, it is desirable to eliminate or reduce insecticide use which will destroy their food supply and may poison young or adult birds. Adequate food is usually not a problem in attracting bluebirds to an area.

Feeders

Bluebirds can be attracted to bird feeders by using raisins, currants or other choice fruits such as chopped apples.

Mockingbirds, catbirds, robins, bluejays and orioles will also use a feeder with with a flat surface, like a medium to large tray. Feeders only serve to attract birds which are already established in the area and do not establish or increase the number of birds.

Habitat

Bluebirds prefer semi-open habitat such as orchards, this type of food.

Bluebirds prefer a feeder pastures with scattered trees, edges of fields, large lawns, or golf courses. They will not live in dense woods, cities, or close-in suburban areas.

Nesting

If suitable bluebird habitat is present but bluebirds are not seen or are rarely observed in the area, it is usually due to lack of suitable nest sites.

Bluebirds will nest only in cavities, either natural or man-made. The number of natural cavities such as fence posts and snags are rapidly decreasing because of new building materials and modern farming and forestry methods.

Competition for the remaining cavities is severe as over 85 species of native North American birds are cavity nesters.

The English sparrow and the European starling are the most severe competitors for nesting sites.

Nesting Boxes

To overcome the lack of suitable cavities, bird boxes carefully designed and located to meet bluebird requirements can be installed.

The design and location of the bluebird nest boxes will eliminate most of the competition from other birds.

The remaining competition can be handled by erecting enough boxes for both the bluebird and other desirable native species such as chickadee, wren, etc. The nest of unwanted species such as the sparrow or starling should be removed.

The bluebird's nest is a neat, round, open nest constructed mostly of fine-textured grass containing about five light blue bluish white eggs.

The English sparrow's nest is bulky, untidy, domed and constructed from a variety of materials giving it the appearance of a trash pile. Sparrows lay about five light gray with dark brown mottling colored eggs.

Erection

Bluebird houses should be mounted about four to six feet above the ground in a fairly open area away from buildings. If possible, the house should face an opening with a tree, large shrub or fence about 25 to 100 feet in front of the house.

The young will fly to this perch on their first flight and will have a better chance of surviving the critical first few hours out of the nest.

If more than one box is needed, they should be spaced about 100 yards apart and screened from each other by trees or shrubs, where possible.

Old bluebird nests should be removed from the house as soon as the young have left to increase the chances of a second or third brood being raised in the same house.

Maintaining bluebird houses year-round can also increase the number of breeding bluebirds by providing winter roosting sites.

Nest boxes reduce the number of birds lost during the winter from exposure to severe weather and predation. The availability of suitable winter roosting sites will help prevent bluebirds from leaving the area.
